STATEN ISLAND, N.Y. -- An ex-convict from New Dorp Beach won't need to worry about filling up his gas tank where he's going.

William Schweitzer has pleaded guilty to third-degree robbery stemming from a heist at a Dongan Hills service station on Nov 7 of last year. A Me

Schweitzer, 43, entered a Citgo station shortly before 5:30 a.m. and simulated he had a firearm under his clothing, an NYPD spokeswoman said.

Schweitzer snatched some cash before heading toward New Dorp on Hylan Boulevard in a tan-colored Ford Explorer, the spokeswoman said.

Police quickly mobilized, canvassing the surrounding area for the suspect and deploying aviation units.

A short time later, units from the 123rd Precinct found an abandoned vehicle matching the description of the suspect's getaway car on the corner of Clarke Avenue and Arthur Kill Road outside Historic Richmond Town, the police spokeswoman said.

NYPD aviation units found the suspect as he ran through residential backyards, tracking him to Colon Avenue in Great Kills where 122nd Precinct officers nabbed him at 6:40 a.m., the police spokeswoman said.

Police found $315 on Schweitzer, but didn't recover a firearm, said the spokeswoman.

In exchange for his plea, the defendant will be sentenced Feb. 10 in Criminal Court to three to six years in prison, according to information from District Attorney Michael E. McMahon's office.

Assistant District Attorney Kate Malloy is prosecuting the case.

Schweitzer has previously served time upstate.

In 2003, he was sentenced to two to four years in prison after being convicted of two counts of third-degree burglary, show online records of the state Department of Corrections and Community Supervision.

Later, in 2009, he was again sentenced to two to four years behind bars for robbery and grand larceny convictions, according to those documents.

STATEN ISLAND, N.Y. -- An ex-con, whose older brother orchestrated a notorious 2008 Election Night hate crime spree, [http://www.silive.com/news/index.ssf/2008/11/suspects_in_staten_island_obam.html] shot his girlfriend in a Fort Wadsworth park, then told police that a black man committed the shooting, according to cops.

When police came upon the scene at Von Briesen Park [http://www.silive.com/news/index.ssf/2015/05/victim_still_in_intensive_care.html] at about 4 a.m. Wednesday, they found Anthony Nicoletti, 23, by a park bench, yelling that his girlfriend had been shot, an NYPD spokeswoman said.

The girlfriend, age 22, had been hit in her lower back and her right wrist, and told officers only that she was in extreme pain, police said.

Nicoletti told officers that the two had been hanging out at the park when a black man he didn't know approached them, started shooting, and fled, according to police.

The victim was rushed to Staten Island University Hospital, Ocean Breeze, where she underwent surgery, police said.

Some time after the surgery, she told police that Nicoletti, not a mystery man, had shot her during an argument, police said. The NYPD spokeswoman couldn't say what sparked the argument.

Police arrested Nicoletti Saturday night at his Wadsworth Avenue home in Fort Wadsworth, where they found him hiding in the basement, cops said.

Nicoletti's brother, Ralph, is serving a nine-year federal prison sentence [http://www.silive.com/northshore/index.ssf/2009/09/9_years_in_prison_for_ringlead.html] for leading a racially-motivated rampage in response to Barack Obama's election in 2008.

He and three cohorts beat a 17-year-old Liberian immigrant with a metal pipe, and ran down another man with their car because they thought, incorrectly, that he was black.

Federal authorities said the group referred to itself as the "Rosebank Krew," and that Anthony Nicoletti was its founder.

At the time, police and federal investigators found a note they believe was written by Anthony Nicoletti addressed to "All my RBK brothers" [http://www.silive.com/news/index.ssf/2009/01/post_21.html] and signed by "The Biggest Boss Ever." It discussed how the RBK Brothers must stand strong together and not talk to the police, and referred to 10 "brothers" that could kill a person's family.

He was later indicted on attempted murder and other charges.

[http://www.silive.com/eastshore/index.ssf/2015/05/attempted-murder_indictment_in.html]

Nicoletti, who now lists a Brooklyn address, and his older brother, Ralph, have been fixtures in Staten Island crime stories for the past seven years.

Ralph Nicoletti is serving a nine-year federal prison sentence

Federal authorities said the group referred to itself as the "Rosebank Krew," and that Anthony Nicoletti was its founder. At the time of the rampage, Anthony Nicoletti was locked up on Rikers Island. He spent five months behind bars on an assault and criminal mischief case, and was released in March 2009.

Police arrested Anthony Nicoletti again in April 2010

[http://www.silive.com/eastshore/index.ssf/2010/04/brother_of_election_night_ramp.html], accusing him of ganging up on a romantic rival with two of his friends, hitting the man in the head with a glass bottle, and stealing his car.

He was convicted of attempted robbery in August 2010 and sentenced to 2 1/2 years in prison. He was released on parole in September 2012, and wound up re-arrested less than a month later, on charges he robbed a friend of his cash and prescription pills. [http://www.silive.com/news/index.ssf/2012/10/out_on_parole_for_less_than_a.html] He was most recently released to parole in October 2013.

Anthony Nicoletti was slated to be arraigned in Criminal Court on the new arrest Wednesday. Public records show he's been ordered held without bail, and is due back in court Friday.

Ex-con who allegedly shot girlfriend now charged with stabbing buddy in back

STATEN ISLAND, N.Y. -- A 23-year-old ex-con who police say shot his girlfriend last May, then tried to blame the crime on a fictitious black man, [http://www.silive.com/news/index.ssf/2015/05/nypd_ex-con_shot_girlfriend_in.html] is now charged with stabbing a friend in the back on a Rosebank street corner.

Anthony Nicoletti, whose older brother orchestrated a notorious 2008 Election Night hate crime spree, [http://www.silive.com/news/index.ssf/2008/11/suspects_in_staten_island_obam.html] waged his latest assault at about 10:30 a.m. Monday morning, police allege.

Nicoletti came upon one of his male friends, who was walking with a relative, by the corner of Tompkins Avenue and Hylan Boulevard, a law enforcement source said.

An argument followed, and Nicoletti stabbed his friend in the back, leaving a "gaping hole," and punched him in the face, sending his head into a metal fence, according to a criminal court complaint.

Police arrested him Tuesday morning, charging him with first- and second-degree assault, as well as third- and fourth-degree criminal possession of a weapon, according to information from Acting District Attorney Daniel Master's office.

Nicoletti, who faces attempted murder charges in the shooting case, was released on $350,000 bond on Aug. 7. He was arrested again on Sept. 3 in a misdemeanor assault case, but released on $1,000 bail.

The shooting took place at about 4 a.m. May 6, at Van Briesen Park in Fort Wadsworth, according to police.

Nicoletti shot his 22-year-old girlfriend in the lower back and right wrist during an argument, authorities allege. When police arrived, they found Nicoletti by a park bench, yelling that the woman had been shot, police said.

Nicoletti, who is white, told officers that the two had been hanging out at the park when a black man he didn't know approached them, started shooting, and fled.

The woman initially only told responding officers that she was in extreme pain, but identified Nicoletti as the shooter sometime after undergoing surgery in Staten Island University Hospital, Ocean Breeze.

Three Indicted in Staten Island Election Night Beatings

by John Del Signore in News on Jan 8, 2009 4:58 pm

While millions across New York City were celebrating Barack Obama's election victory on November 4th, a group of young Staten Island men went on a violent rampage that left two young black men beaten and another man in a coma, prosecutors say. Three of the alleged attackers were arraigned in Federal District Court in Brooklyn today and charged with conspiracy to interfere with voting rights in their efforts to "injure, oppress, threaten and intimidate" black people on election night, the Times reports. Each plead not guilty.

Prosecutors say Ralph Nicoletti, 18; Michael Contreras, 18; and Brian Carranza, 21; styled themselves as a gang called the "Rosebank Krew," or "RBK." On November 4th they gathered at a "makeshift outdoor clubhouse" to watch the election results on the Internet. After Obama's win, they decided to set out for an area of Staten Island they called "n-----town," according to the Daily News. Their first victim was 17-year-old Ali Kamara, a black Muslim who they allegedly beat with a metal pipe and a collapsible police baton while screaming, "Obama!"

After a number of other less-violent assaults, the RBK ran over a man wearing a hooded sweatshirt who they believed was black. It was 38-year-old Ronald Forte, a white supervisor at ShopRite; he spent 45 days in a coma. Forte's mother told reporters yesterday, "He has to learn how to walk and talk again. I have watched my son in a coma, for 45 days, while those boys were out. They left him in a gutter to die. I had to leave my job to take care of my 38-year-old son because of some senseless act, and it's never going to go away."

Carranza (pictured left) was freed on $200,000 bond yesterday, but Contreras is being held until the state courts lift an order of protection barring him from being around his stepfather. As for Nicoletti—who's had a rap sheet since he was 14—the magistrate refused to release him on bail because prosecutors say he's trying to intimidate witnesses. His younger brother Anthony is currently doing time on Rikers for running people over, and the Staten Island Advance has it that FBI agents found a letter from Anthony in which he called himself "Boss Behind Bars" and asserted that he could "kill a person's family."
